References for Interpersonal/Relational/Intersectional Psychoanalysis

Note: Over the past few years, there continues to be an explosion of new articles in psychoanalysis, psychiatry, and medicine relating to intersectional identities as well as to interpersonal/relational theories that address the impact that differences in race, ethnicity, religion, culture, gender, gender identity, sexual identity, and disability can have on personal development and psychoanalytic/psychotherapeutic treatment. This update (8/21/2026) from the first three PPSNE bibliographies (3/2023, 2/23/2024, 9/6/2025) includes many resources that were cited in both national and local presentations this past year. It is not a comprehensive list, so if you would like to suggest other papers to add, please let us know and contact our PPSNE administrator, Alice Rapkin, office@pineanalysis.org.
